Hi [First Name],

Most DPDP conversations stop at consent.

but consent is just the entry point. the bigger challenge lies in what follows: discovering personal data across systems, defining retention periods, and accounting for offline records.

we're covering exactly that in our upcoming webinar.

Beyond Consent:
Data Discovery, Retention & Compliance Under DPDP

This session is split into two parts:

- 1

The Compliance Gap
How long you can legally hold data, and what to do with the offline data most frameworks conveniently ignore.
- 2

The Execution Gap
A live demo showing how data discovery and global profile generation actually close that gap in practice.

You'll leave with a practical framework for defining retention timelines, governing offline data, and understanding how data discovery and global profile generation work in practice.

Built for legal and compliance leads, cxos, and it decision-makers who want to see the mechanics behind the mandate, not just hear about them again.

Registrants will receive the recording, so sign up even if the timing is tight.
